The "Art of CodeFu" moves to the next level of game building for everyone - beginners to returning students. During spring session we will be using Bloxels, a simple yet powerful way for everyone to create characters, art, stories, and games. Students will create their very own video games using block coding that have specific gameplay traits or can be configured. In this session students become the artist, writer, designer and director of their own video game!

The skills developed thru computer coding languages are an important part of literacy in today's society. Your student will learn essential strategies for problem solving, project design, and communicating ideas - all invaluable life- skills.
